the front car, while the others attended to Deputy, who was then dead.
Ross on the Stand.

The testimony of Ross was the same as to the accident. He said he had been with Burwell since 8 o'clock of the night the accident occurred, and that the party had been at the Jefferson Hotel, at Rueger's and at the Commercial Hotel. He, Hollingsworth and Deputy had a drink at the Jefferson, but he could not remember whether Burwell had joined them then. He drank beer while the others drank whiskey. There were six in the party at Rueger's: himself, Hollingsworth, Deputy, Dr. R. H. Talbot, Burwell and Jordan, where they had supper, at which two quarts of champagne were served. He said that he knew nothing about the agreement to race, and he didn't know that there was a race. He was unable to tell of the speed of the two cars, even approximately, though he admitted that they went faster than he could walk, probably as much as five miles an hour. Mr. Mathews tried to draw from him a further idea as to the approximate speed of the machines, but ever as the question was put to him, Ross replied that he couldn't tell about the speed and didn't know. Then came his story of the accident, which agreed, in its details, with that told by McKissick.

J. W. Currie, of Fayetteville, N. C., who met the party on the street soon after he left Gilbert's Hotel at 11:45 o'clock, and was invited to join it by Colonel Hollingsworth, said he was not conscious of speeding, and he was unable to say whether the cars exceeded twenty miles an hour. He said "they were going pretty fast," and at "a good, swift gait," but he could not express his ideas of speed in approximate figures. They all stalled when it came down to figures. He admitted, however, that he had stated before the coroner's jury that he "supposed they were going at a rate between twenty-five and fifty miles an hour," with emphasis on the word "supposed."

Thought Burwell Drunk.
Bicycle Policeman Palmer, of the Richmond force, was called. He made the arrests, taking Jordan at Bennett's undertaking rooms, where Deputy's body was sent, and arresting Burwell at the Jefferson Hotel. He said that Jordan told him he had been racing. He examined the car, and found the left door torn off the hinges, the right guard bent and the upholstery in the rear seat pushed up.

Mr. Mathews asked him as to the circumstances of Burwell's arrest, and as to the latter's condition. The officer answered that he found Burwell in the reclining room connected with the Turkish baths, and that he was in a stupor. He thought Burwell was drunk, and decided to wait until he was in better condition to recognize the gravity of the occasion.

County Constable Burch was called, but he knew nothing more than the testimony he had heard at the coroner's inquest.
It remained for Constable Bondall to be the star witness, and about him the lawyers wrangled, as if, one lawyer said, it were a political meeting. He told of examining the ground after the accident, and of finding that a tree had been struck and that a cedar post and a letterbox post had been knocked down.

He said that the front car kept a straight line for 250 feet, and then turned suddenly to the left, and that the second car slid 165 feet.

Posts Knocked Down.
From what he saw on the ground he was able to swear that the cars were running at a rate of more than eighteen miles an hour. The fact that the posts had been knocked down also indicated, to his mind, illegal speed. There was much irrelevant questioning, and cross-questioning, and talk of what weight hammer it would take to knock down the much discussed posts, of whether they were rotten, and whether or not the swinging door of the leading automobile would not have broken them.

Remarkable Christmas Present.

Among the curious Christmas presents of this year will be one for a man of national reputation, which has been all year in the making.

Way last January the present was decided upon, and a friend of the prominent gentleman requested the Burrelle Press Clipping Bureau, of New York, to watch every paper in America, and to take up every item which appeared concerning the man.

The clipping bureau people followed instructions, and now present the history of one year in the life of this special man. The history ends just after election, and the 20,642 newspaper items found include everything from a three-line editorial mention to full-page illustrated stories. These have been mounted on 3,200 great sheets of Irish linen paper and bound into three massive volumes.

At the head of each item is the name and date of paper clipped from, this information having been put in with a book typewriter. The words thus inserted amount to 153,852.

In actual time, a very strict record of which has been kept, the work has required sixty-four working days throughout the year, and has kept in employment during that time thirty people as readers, clippers, sorters, mounters and binders. Every newspaper of importance is represented.

This is merely a specimen of some of the unique orders which get into the Burrelle Bureau, for the extent to which clippings are used by individuals and by business concerns seems to be remarkable.

There are many people in private as well as in public life who need press clippings and don't know it. It might be well for them to look up this Burrelle, who is said to be so well known that a letter simply addressed "Burrelle, New York," will reach him with no delay.

side-shuffling—worse than automobile skidding—and the court habitude didn't know whether to laugh or yawn. Then the witness was not willing to swear that the posts could not have been broken by the impact of a human body, and then he said that the cars either went more than twenty-five miles an hour, or didn't try to stop, in which latter case they might have been running at not more than fifteen miles an hour. But even to the last he insisted that the tracks showed that the automobiles were running at more than twenty-five miles an hour, and from this he could not be diverted. His testimony was not considered by Magistrate Puryear.

Fined Merely for Speeding.
Mr. Mathews opened the argument, but refused to specify on evidence of speeding until the opposing lawyers had completed their argument, which caused more wrangling. He asked that the warrants charging murder be dismissed.

In rendering his decision, Magistrate Puryear said that there was no excuse on which to hold them on the criminal warrants, but he was persuaded that Burwell and Jordan had driven their cars recklessly and had exceeded the speed limit.

"I fine you $100 each," he said.

FREDERIC GEBHARD DIES IN NEW YORK

Was One of Best Known Sportsmen and Clubmen of City.

New York, September 9.—Frederic Gebhard, for years one of the best known sportsmen and clubmen of New York, died yesterday at the Garden City Hotel of a complication of diseases. Mr. Gebhard had been ill since last April, when he passed through a very severe attack of pneumonia. His second wife, who was Marie Wilson, one of the original Florodora sextette girls, had been with him since he left the city after his illness, and she was present at the time of his death.

Frederic Gebhard, who is about fifty-five years of age, was known to the day of his death as "Freddie" to every member of such exclusive clubs as the Union Club, Metropolitans, Kickerbocker, New York Yacht and Regatta. He was of the older crowd of wealthy young men who twenty-five years ago were noted throughout the world for their high living. He was the son of an old-time wine merchant, who, at his death, thirty-five years ago, left an estate which produced an income of about $100,000 a year each for the young man and for his sister, who later became Mrs. Frederic Gebhard. This enabled the young man to indulge in almost any hobby, and in his early youth it was racing. It was when he was the owner of a strong string of horses about twenty-five years ago that Lily Langtry, the first of society women to take to the stage, came to this country for her first tour. The beauty of the Jersey Lily made a captive of the young man, very speedily the names of the woman who had been a leader of the then Prince of Wales set and the young man were associated. He accompanied her about the country on her tour, and was seen with her everywhere, and it was reported they were to be married. In St. Louis he was engaged to wed Miss Lily Morris, of Baltimore, who had won some publicity by wading through a city fountain. They were married, but the marriage did not turn out happily. There was a divorce, and Mrs. Gebhard later became Mrs. Henry Clewes, Jr., from whom there was a separation. Although Mr. Gebhard's income was so large he not only lived up to it, but beyond it. Racing, stables, even when they contain such good made when they were young, and later, when he returned to England, later to become Mrs. Hugo de Balhe, while Gebhard returned to his old haunts in the city.

Married Lily Morris.
It was in 1894 that the announcement came that Mr. Gebhard was engaged to wed Miss Lily Morris, of Baltimore, who had won some publicity by wading through a city fountain. They were married, but the marriage did not turn out happily. There was a divorce, and Mrs. Gebhard later became Mrs. Henry Clewes, Jr., from whom there was a separation. Although Mr. Gebhard's income was so large he not only lived up to it, but beyond it. Racing, stables, even when they contain such good made when they were young, and later, when he returned to England, later to become Mrs. Hugo de Balhe, while Gebhard returned to his old haunts in the city.

Acted as Wine Salesman.
Mrs. Neilson, his sister, obtained a judgment for $65,000 against him, which was believed to be for the purpose of protecting a trust fund, and her brother undertook the promotion of a brand of champagne to help out. He made a large income from this source, but it was at the expense of his health. Four years ago it was announced that he had married Marie Wilson, one of the prettiest of the original Florodora sextette girls, and a little later they were reported to have separated. For the last several years Mr. Gebhard's health was not of the best, and when he was stricken with pneumonia last April, few believed he could survive. But he managed to get better and went to Garden City. Here his wife joined him and he was reported to be progressing favorably until a week ago, when he suffered a relapse.

MOVING DAY

Business Men's Club Opens in New Quarters on Monday.
Yesterday was moving day at the Business Men's Club. After lunch had been served in the old club dining room, on the top floor of the Bank of Richmond Building, the club was closed, when it will open for breakfast in handsome new quarters, occupying the entire top floor of the American National Bank Building. New furnishings and fittings have been installed, and the club rooms will be among the handsomest in the city. Secretary Edward Breeden supervised the removal last yesterday afternoon, and last night everything had been transferred to the new rooms. To-day will be spent in putting things in order for the large attendance of members expected at the opening on Monday.

MANY PROBLEMS BEFORE SYNOD

But Utmost Harmony Prevails in All General Discussion.

ADVANCING MISSION WORK

Message Brought From Japan, Where Lutherans Carry the Light.

Increased activity in mission work in home and foreign fields, and the first and most important step in the direction of the unification of American Lutheranism by the general adoption of a standard book of worship by the several groups into which the denomination is divided, formed the basis of the deliberations at the third day's session of the twelfth biennial convention of the United Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in the South. The convention will probably be brought to a close to-night, after having been in session since Tuesday. The third and most successful conference of the Women's Missionary Society of the United Synod was ended yesterday morning.

Bringing with him a message from Japan, where for four and a half years he has been engaged in mission work, Rev. A. J. Stirewalt appeared before the body and made a forcible appeal for further evangelization in the Orient. Through the board of foreign missions, the missionary is asking the United Synod for an appropriation of $25,000 with which to complete the establishing of a mission school in Japan. This constitutes one of the important matters which is to be finally acted upon to-day. There is little question that the appropriation will be made. Success has attended the Japan mission from its inception, and it is the desire of the synod that the work in this field shall be continued.

Harmony Prevails.

Harmony, in an unusual degree, has characterized the various sessions. On all questions that have come before the body there has been a general agreement of opinion. This is not meant to say that the convention has been attended by any display of apathy. Sharp and prolonged discussions have followed the introduction and preceded the adoption of many reports. For an hour and a half yesterday afternoon a spirited debate, in which practically every delegate participated, was in progress following the presentation of the report by the committee on book of worship. But while there have been differences of opinion, there has been no conflict. Since the roll call at the opening session, the convention has been free from radical issues such as have arisen at similar ecclesiastical councils.

The convention opened promptly at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, and following the usual devotional service, the report of the board of foreign missions, showing the work carried on during the past biennium to have been successful beyond precedent, was presented. Various recommendations contained in this report will be finally acted upon to-day, when it is returned to the body proper after having been considered by the committee to which it was referred after it had been presented.

The report of the board of foreign missions was presented by Dr. Robert C. Holland, president, and was referred to a committee for consideration preparatory to being finally acted upon to-day. The board reported the incorporation of the mission in Japan, dwelling particularly on the work which is being carried on in that country.

To Help Japan Missions.

The board recommended that its action, as presented in the report, be approved by the synod, that the charter of the board be accepted, that the sum of $15,000 annually be apportioned among the different synods as the declared minimum amount needed during the ensuing biennium to meet the current expenses of the mission, apart from the buildings which should or may be erected, that the Epiphany seas n be recognized in all Lutheran congregations; that April Japan Day be designated as the season for special offerings for the Japan missions in the Sunday schools; that the United Synod recognize the Mission League a valuable agency to supplant the small apportionment, also commend and endorse it, and that the synod urge prompt response to the call which comes from Japan for an additional $25,000, in order to place the mission school in Kumamoto upon an adequate working basis. The report will be considered by item, but it seems probable that it will be adopted in its entirety, with no changes being made.

For Lutheran School.

The cause of missions, both home and foreign, is before the present convention with the strongest appeal in the history of the church in the South. Four years ago, at Dallas, Texas, the United Synod appropriated $25,000 for the establishing in Japan of a Lutheran school of the grade which corresponds to the middle school of the Japanese government system, together with a theological department for the training of the ministry of native students. Difficulties which could not have been foreseen developed, and the amount of the original appropriation was found inadequate for the purpose for which it had been intended. The synod, therefore, faces the situation where it must either furnish an additional appropriation which will insure the carrying out of the original project, or it must withdraw its missionations contained therein. It is recommended that larger equipment be provided for the home, and it is probable that the appeal made will be granted. Final action on the report will be taken to-day.

Sunday School Work.

The report of the Sunday school committee, which was being discussed when the convention adjourned on Thursday, was again brought before the body and was adopted. Recommendations made are that the synod appoint a committee to arrange a teachers' training class; that for the development of the young people in benevolence a resolution be passed requesting all Sunday schools to take offerings for the several causes of the United Synod, to which congregations are asked to contribute, and that a standing committee be appointed on Sunday school work with the suggestion that it is to be more localized.

The report of the committee on deaconess training work recommended the appointment of a committee on inner missions to watch the development of the work within the Lutheran Church in respect to inner mission possibilities and to direct the training of young women who consecrate themselves to works of mercy.

By the adoption of a resolution the body authorized the expenditure of $50,000 for the erection of an administration building which is to constitute an addition to the Theological Seminary at Columbia, S. C. The report of the committee on district synods, indicating prosperous conditions in various sections which they represent, was adopted. The report of the treasurer was audited by a special committee to which it has been referred, and was found to be correct. Other reports read and adopted after more or less ton, Ga., and Rev. George H. Cox, D. D., of Glass, N. C. These were the last of a series of six addresses arranged as a feature of the convention. Mr. Shealey was introduced by Dr. A. G. Voligh, president of the Theological Seminary at Mt. Pleasant, S. C., and Dr. Cox by Dr. W. H. Greaver, editor-in-chief of the official church publications.

Consecration services, conducted by Mrs. E. C. Cronk, of Columbia, S. C., marked the close of the third biennial Women's Missionary Conference of the United Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran Church yesterday morning. The final session was given over to the consideration and discussion of the president's report and the reading of a number of valuable papers on mission work.

In the absence of the president, Dr. A. J. Morehead, who was forced to return last night to his duties at Salem, Va., to-day's session of the United Synod will be presided over by the vice-president, Rev. M. G. G. Shorer. Many of the delegates left for their homes last night, while others will remain over to-morrow.

The Sunday-school class of the First English Evangelical Lutheran Church will be greeted to-morrow morning at 9:30 o'clock in the chapel of Richmond College by the members of the synod and conference and others in attendance upon the joint convention. A special musical program will be rendered and short addresses will be delivered by the visitors.

discussion were those of the committee on incorporation of the Orphan's Home, committee on board of publication and on Theological Seminary.

On Common Worship.
Spirited debate followed the presentation of the report of the committee on common worship. The United Synod, some years ago, started the movement for the unification of the denomination by the adoption of a common, or standard, book of worship, hymnals and liturgies, and has since met with the cordial co-operation of other synods and other church councils. The last synod arranged for the completion of the standard book of worship, likewise a hymnal in the shortest possible time. Involving a task of considerable difficulty and tremendous importance, the work has not been completed, and it was moved yesterday that final action be deferred to the time of the next meeting of the synod, two years hence, which precipitated what was perhaps the most vigorous discussion of the convention. Final action in the matter will be taken to-day.

In the interests of the Theological Seminary and Lutheran Church publications, addresses were delivered last night in the chapel of Richmond College by Rev. T. W. Shouley, of Guy-
